ELLIS ON THE TARIFF.

Speech of Hon. W. T. Ellis Against the McKinley Tariff Bill.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Probably no discussion on the floor of this House ever attracted more attention or was more generally read throughout the country than the debate on the McKinley Tariff Bill. The interest in the subject-matter of that discussion did not subside with the close of that debate nor with the national election which followed, but from that time to the present moment the discussion has gone on through the newspapers and in the periodicals of the country. The arguments have been thorough and exhaustive. It is therefore reasonably certain that nothing new now remains to be said. The question as to whether the Government may rightfully impose taxes on the people for the purpose of protection, or whether the limit of its authority ceases when it has levied taxes enough to defray its ordinary expenses and to meet its public obligations as they may mature, is a question which it is fair to assume is now well understood by the people and one upon which they are prepared to render a final verdict when the matter is again referred to them.

I do not agree to the correctness of the statement made by the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McKim] in opening the discussion on this bill, that the people had declared in favor of protection. True, the friends of that system secured a majority of the electoral votes in the last Presidential election, but the popular verdict was against the system.

Nor can I agree with the honorable gentleman who has preceded me [Mr. Post] in the position he assumes when he says the doctrine of a tariff for revenue only has been rejected by the country. But I am glad to see that the people have not been made in favor of the free coinage of silver, and if he and his party associates will bring forward a bill providing for the free coinage of that metal such a measure will have my cordial support, and I believe it will receive the support of the manufacturing community in this House. [Applause]

But, Mr. Chairman, the subject of taxation is always one of interest to those upon whom its burden rests, and since this bill deals with it subject upon the largest scale it is perfectly certain that the country will watch with interest the final disposition this body will make of the pending measure in which they are so vitally concerned. I have heard it claimed here many times during the brief period I have been a member of this body that the party now in power had failed to redeem the pledges it made the country during the last campaign and especially the pledge it made the soldiers. But surely if it passes this bill, no one will be reckless enough to say that it has not fully redeemed all its pledges to the manufacturing interest of the country, which by this bill it makes the favored objects of its bounty.

The majority of the committee which reported this measure, in considering the subject of public revenues has not been guided by the considerations, as the report shows, by the question of how much money was necessary to defray the expenses of the Government prudently and economically administered, and with that fact ascertained proceeded to distribute the burden of taxation justly and according to the ability of each to pay. But starting with the fact ascertained, that the expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, would amount to $293,000,000, and that the revenues for the same period on the present basis of taxation would amount to $285,000,000, which would leave a surplus in the Treasury on June 30, 1890, of $8,000,000, the committee has not sought to reduce taxation nor to equalize its burden. On the contrary, it is stated by the minority of the committee, that the effect of this bill will be to increase the annual duties on imported goods, omitting the sugar schedule, in the sum of about $65,000,000. By this system of increased taxation upon foreign imports, framed for the benefit of the few at the expense of the taxpayers of the country, it is proposed not only to "maintain but to enlarge our manufacturing plants," and to place them safely beyond all competition.

The general policy of the bill is to do more than to protect the "to foster and promote American production and diversification of American industry," and this, it is proposed, shall be accomplished without regard to the prices the people will be compelled to pay under this system for all they consume.

The fair construction of the provisions of this bill, construed in the light of the report that accompanies it, is that the object of Federal taxation is protection (to the manufacturer), and revenue a mere incident. However able and skillful the advocates of such a doctrine may defend it, they will never be able to bring permanently to its support a majority of the people of this country, and the more the system of protection is discussed, the better it is understood, the more it is seen to be a system of taxation for the purpose of protection, and this is precisely what the friends of protection are required to establish before the scheme can be carried out. The false clamor of a "home market" and "protection to American labor," can no longer be used to deceive the American farmer or to terrify the American laborer.

The farmer, despairing of the home market for his corn, uses it for fuel, because it is cheaper than the coal. The American wage-earner has discovered that his labor is on the free list, and as he has witnessed the downward tendency of his wages and discovered that the system of protection enhances the cost of every article he eats and every article he wears, he argues that a high tariff is a benefit to him or that it protects him from the "pauper labor of Europe" has become—

* * * as tedious as a twice told tale.

No amount of special pleading will convince the workingmen that protection benefits them, for experience has shown that their employers, who riot on Government bounties, divide no part of their increased profits resulting from protection with those who mine the iron and the coal, run the furnaces, or turn out the manufactured goods.

Protection accumulates no fund from which the wages of laborers is increased, and as long as a system which taxes the machinery they operate, the raw material they work with, and the finished goods they sell, is enforced they will continue to be the victims rather than the beneficiaries of that system.

While a comparison of the rate of wages in this country under the present system of protection with the rate of wages in similar industries in England under a system of free trade neither proves the merits of the one system nor the demerits of the other, yet a reference to the history of the progress which the laboring classes have made under these opposite systems is not without protection with reason in aiding to a correct solution of the question whether a high tariff makes high wages and a low tariff low wages. If it can be successfully shown that wages have advanced under a system of free trade in England, it follows that the rate of wages would be affected in a like manner under a similar system here, and the argument that protection is a blessing to the laboring man would not only be disproved, but the assertion of those who contend that protection confers no benefits upon the laboring class, would be an established fact. It fortunately happens that the effect which the system of free trade in England has had upon the rate of wages has not been left in doubt or uncertainty. The history of the subject, based upon elaborate and carefully prepared statistics, proves that the condition of the working classes in England under a system of free trade has been greatly improved.

country. If the gentleman from Iowa will take the trouble to examine he will find that the laborer who comes to this country and whose presence here has done so much to injure the condition of American workmen came from protective Germany, Russia, and Italy, and other protective countries of Europe, and not from free-trade England, as the gentleman says to suppose.

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

How does the record which a protective tariff has made for the wage-earners in this country compare with the showing those English working classes are able to make under their system of free trade? Protection has had a fair trial here; for over a quarter of a century it has been in operation; it ought to be able to stand or fall by the record it has made. Is the workingman of this country better paid, better fed, better clothed, and has a better home than the wage-earner under our former system of low tariff, and is he better off than the laborer in free-trade England? These are the questions which the advocates of protection must answer affirmatively if they expect longer to retain the support of the laboring masses of this country. The iron industry of Pennsylvania is a highly protected industry, and if protection accumulated a fund out of which the wages of labor are increased we may reasonably look to this industry as one likely to furnish the best example of a liberal display of its bounty. What are the results?

The owners of these mines are protected by a duty of 75 cents per ton on ore, and an additional duty on the manufactured products. If protection is designed to help the laborer, here is an opportunity for a liberal display of its bounty. What are the results?

Contract labor, cheap laborers from Italy and other countries of Continental Europe, swarm here and compete with American laborers for work. These foreign laborers, who have come here in the last ten years, and the iron masters of Pennsylvania are chief among those who encourage this importation of cheap labor, and then hire at prices which means starvation to the home laborer. The iron masters of Pennsylvania are not alone in this. They exist in every great iron-producing section of the country.

There are over 150,000 men in this country employed in the mining of iron. This industry, like that of iron, is protected by a duty of 75 cents per ton, and if protection is a benefit it is natural to presume that coal miners have realized its advantages.

As illustrating the condition of those who work in the coal mines of the country, I quote from the evidence of a witness who testified before the Senate committee in 1888. He says: "Sixty thousand heads of families, to whom probably 200,000 women and children are looking for support, are in a pitiable, miserable condition, poorly paid, poorly clothed, poorly fed, and poorly housed. From any section among the miners in England I may say that they are really better cared for than are the coal-miners in the United States."

That protection does not help our coal-miners, but that it is a real injury to them, I add the following statement from a special committee of the House, who examined the condition of affairs as they actually existed in Illinois in July of last year. He says: "Ten thousand, five hundred coal-miners in Northern Illinois have been unemployed and destitute since May 1, when they refused to accept a reduction in wages averaging 15 cents per ton."

The same report from which the above is taken shows that the average price paid operatives for mining a ton of coal is only 7 1/2 cents, less than the protection given to the owners of the mines. In the face of these facts how can it be pretended that protection is a benefit to the men who mine the coal? But when the miners ask for an advance in their wages they are informed by the owners of the mines that protection does not protect them, that they get no benefit from it; and yet they insist that the duty on coal be continued.

all of whom use domestic and not imported goods, may see just what protection is annually costing them, it is found in each case that the laborers and operatives were as a rule in no better condition than those who mine coal and iron and operate the iron furnaces of Pennsylvania and other States.

The laborers employed in the manufacture of wool and woolen goods, including the establishments which manufacture clothing, if examined would have made the same story. They could show how the English and Hungarian who swarm at Cincinnati and who live in fifth and sixth streets, have succeeded in getting wages to a point where they can barely eke out an existence. It may be truly said of these laborers in the protected industries of the country that they—

Work, work, work!
And what are its wages? A bed of straw,
A crust of bread, and rags.

Sharing no part of the bounties, which protection lavishes upon their task-masters, receiving no fair share of the wealth which they annually produce, the laboring masses of the people will no longer sustain a policy which proposes to wed them for all future time to poverty and want, and which deprives them of a fair chance to earn food and raiment for themselves and families.

The advocates of this system, recognizing as they must recognize that the workingmen of the country can no longer be induced to support a system which has proved so disastrous to them, turn their attention to the American farmer and seek to deceive him into the belief that he can be made the beneficiary of protection by giving him

AN INCREASED DUTY ON WOOL.

The farmers will hardly be deceived. This attempt to secure support will not succeed. Like the wage-earners of the country they demand relief. The present depression that prevails in the prices of all farm products has convinced them that they are entitled to speedy relief, and they will not believe that an increased rate of taxation on wool will increase their wealth. They understand perfectly well that they are already taxed too much. What they demand and what they are entitled to have is a reduction of taxation and a larger supply of money and of political power which refuses to grant this relief will not receive their support. This scheme to increase the duty on wool, which is in the nature of a bribe to the farmers, implies that the system of protection shall be preserved, but the farmer knows that he will not receive any benefit from it. He will not receive any benefit from it. He will not receive any benefit from it.

But we are told that this country has made marvelous progress in the accumulation of wealth under the present system. That wealth has accumulated within the last twenty-five years will be denied by none, and have the farmers grown richer, and have the condition of the masses been improved? That is the vital question, for if wealth has only accumulated in

THE AMERICAN AND WATER-WORKS.

In its issue of Feb. 1, 1890, the Hopkinsville American came out strongly against water-works and declared that it would oppose their construction and that the only condition upon which it would favor them would be: "On condition that they will furnish the city water free of charge, and to consumers at a reasonable rate, and place a hydrant wherever one is wanted, the American will favor allowing them the use of the streets."

Now all this has changed. In the American of May 17 the McIntyre scheme is championed, which contained a perpetual franchise at a cost of $50 per hydrant to the city.

The American in its new born zeal goes farther, accuses the editor of the Kentuckian of inconsistency, ridicules Dr. Wheeler and insults Judge Petree, because they, with many other citizens of both political parties, opposed the water-works at this time, when a railroad is the first and greatest need. Judge Petree was referred to as an "old fogey lawyer of small caliber" who "assumed ignorance of his subject and then misrepresented it."

The Kentuckian has carefully refrained from entering into any sort of controversy with the American, and will not now dispute with it, but this gratuitous assault upon good citizens demands attention. At least the public should know that it comes from an editor whose agility in changing his views on business propositions is only equalled by his political somersaults. The Council acted wisely in rejecting the McIntyre proposition and the American stands alone in entertaining a contrary opinion.

The commission of Postmaster McKenzie expires on July 19. Maj. John W. Breathitt expects to be appointed postmaster and his appointment will in the regular course of official business be made about thirty days from this time. This is of course provided he gets the place, and his friends express no doubt that the genial major, who is the leader of his party in this county, has been slated for the position for some months. So far so good, but here comes in a matter that is worrying the Republicans to some extent. Maj. Breathitt is County Court Clerk and as the two offices are incompatible he would have to resign the clerkship to accept the other office. This would create a vacancy to be filled by appointment till Sept. 1. A Democrat would get this appointment and as the supplemental registration occurs in the Clerk's office on July 28, the Republican candidates are showing considerable alarm. They seem to attach great importance to this matter, as if unfair advantages could or would be attempted by either party. This is not in accordance with the spirit of the law and so far as Democrats are concerned no advantage is sought and no unfairness will be attempted. The clerks all over the county, in a spirit of fairness, were conceded to the Republicans, although the law provided that all officers should be jointly appointed by a board which at present is composed of two Democrats and one Republican. No Democrat has any objection to having Maj. Breathitt conduct the supplemental registration, which he can do by delaying the making of his bond for ten days. He has the confidence of the people and the Republicans are doing him an injustice by the implication contained in their frantic desire to have him hold over, and it may be added that the implied reflection upon any Democratic successor who might be appointed is also unkind and altogether uncalled for.

Congressman Bynum, of Indiana, intimated in a speech Saturday that Bayne, of Pennsylvania, had lied. For this he was called up to the bar and publicly censured by Speaker Reed. Nearly the entire Democratic side of the House went with him and stood by him during the administering of the formal rebuke. At the conclusion Mr. Bynum remarked that under the circumstance he considered it a decoration of honor.

The very able speech of Hon. W. T. Ellis on the McKinley bill, delivered in Congress on the 8th inst., is published to-day. It is a speech that every farmer and every workman, white or colored, should read and ponder. The tariff is the one great question before the country to-day and no man should fail to inform himself upon the subject.

The Prohibitionists held a state convention at Lexington last week and nominated Mrs. Josephine K. Henry, of Versailles, as their candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals. It is to be hoped Josie will not make such a spectacle of herself during the canvass as did the last Henry who ran for this office.

Another of those too-frequent mine-horrors occurred at Wilkesbarre, Pa. last week and twenty-eight miners were buried alive by a cave-in. Only one of the men was rescued alive.

Precinct conventions were held in the city, Pembroke, Casky and Mt. Vernon Saturday. No other districts held meetings and even in these very little interest was manifested in the matter. The convention adopted the following resolutions and adjourned in a few minutes:

2d. Resolved, That the delegates appointed by this Convention to the Superior Court Convention at Bowling Green, June 11, be instructed to cast the vote of Christian county for H. M. H. Yost for Superior Court Judge as long as his name is before the Convention.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until a few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. The Appellate Clerk's Race.

Up to Sunday 59 counties had been heard from in the Clerkship race, having 603 of the 917-votes. Of these votes Madden gets 163 first choice and 28 second choice; Longmore 116 first, 29 second; Martin 85 first, 36 second; Adams 99 first, 20 second; Poore 72 first, 18 second; VanZandt 4 first, none second; Brinkley 9 first, none second. Contrary to public expectation Poore is badly beaten. In the First district Caldwell, Lyon and Livingston all go against him and Crittenden sends uninstructed delegates. In the Second he carries but one county—Christian. In the Third he has carried none so far as heard from. Bracken, Christian and Trigg are the only counties outside the Purchase so far reported for him.

CARLISLE WON IT.

The Nomination Reached on The Ninth Ballot—Formally Elected Saturday.

Hon. John G. Carlisle was nominated for Senator Friday night. When the caucus met Mr. Knott's name was withdrawn and but two ballots were taken. On the first Mr. Carlisle received 52 votes, Lindsay 33 and McCreary 30.

When the vote was announced Mr. McCreary's name was withdrawn and the balloting began again. In this ballot Carlisle received 72 votes and before the result was announced it was moved that he be nominated by acclamation. This was done amid the wildest applause.

A committee of five was appointed by the chairman to notify Mr. Carlisle of his nomination and to conduct him to the chamber.

He appeared and formally accepted the nomination.

On Saturday he was elected in joint session, being placed in nomination by Senator Lindsay. The vote stood 107 for Carlisle and 15 for Silas Adams, the Republican nominee.

Senator Carlisle will go to Washington in time to vote on the tariff bill. He will then resign his place as Representative and qualify as Senator in time to again vote on it in the Senate. He will deliver the speech prepared for the House debate in the Senate.

An election in the Sixth district of Kentucky will be held in thirty days. Already there is a field full of candidates. Speaker Harvey Myers, Senators Dickerson, Newman and McCain, Theodore Halan and others are among them.

In almost every neighborhood throughout the west there are one or more persons whose lives have been saved by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, or have been cured of chronic diarrhoea by it. Such persons take especial pleasure in recommending the Remedy to others. The praise that follows its introduction and use makes it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Druggists Leavell.

CREAM OF NEWS.

Charged With Murder.

Lewis Meriwether and Lindsay Perkins, both colored, were arrested near Barker's Mill last Friday, and lodged in jail here on a charge of murder. Their examining trial will come up Friday, the 23d. They were arrested on suspicion of having been implicated in the murder of Albert Wills, col., who was found floating in West Fork about two weeks ago.

A Dead Infant Found.

A newly-born infant was found in a paper box on the premises of Mr. George Wells, in the Seventh Ward, Friday afternoon. It was found by a colored woman on the back of his lot, near the river, and the police were at once notified. The child was in a paper box, and the lid was tied on with a cloth string. The body was badly decomposed and its color could not be learned. The child had evidently been still-born and the inhuman part of the transaction was that it had not been decently buried. The corpse was turned over to a colored man who was ordered to bury it. Up to yesterday nobody had appeared to claim it and the mystery will probably never be unraveled.

The Doctors' Meeting.

The State Medical Society which met at Henderson last week was largely attended. The actual number of doctors present was from 125 to 130. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Dr. Geo. W. Boeler, Clinton, Ky.

Senior Vice-President—Dr. J. M. Pointz, Madison.

Permanent Secretary—Dr. Steele Bailey, Stanford.

Assistant Secretary—Dr. J. Y. Oldham, Lexington.

Treasurer—Dr. J. B. Kennard, Lancaster.

Librarian—Dr. T. B. Greenly, West Point.

The city of Lexington was selected as the next place of meeting, and Dr. David Barrow, of Lexington, made chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Twenty delegates were appointed to the American Medical Association meeting at Nashville to-day, one of them being Dr. Andrew Seargent, of this city.

Col. Brown's Big Case.

Col. M. D. Brown, the popular attorney of this city, has been retained in a very important case of great magnitude, involving millions of property in the city of Philadelphia. In 1780 George and Henry Miller, brothers, of Germany, patented a large tract of land in the suburbs of the then small city of Philadelphia, which they subsequently leased to the city for 99 years. Geo. Miller never married and all of the rights under the lease descended at his death to the heirs of his brother Henry. A few years ago the lease expired and the title to the property has never been fixed. The tract is now in the heart of Philadelphia and much of it is covered by magnificent business blocks and the most substantial improvements. It is worth about sixty millions of dollars. Col. Brown's wife is one of the descendants of Henry Miller, her mother, Mrs. Neat, of Galena, Ind., being one of the nearest living heirs. Other heirs are Henry Miller, of Kendall, Kansas, and Mrs. Betsy Spangler, of Winchester, Va.

Col. Brown leaves next month and will have a consultation with all the heirs at Galena, Ind., June 13 and from there will go to Philadelphia to look after the very important interests of his clients. The only point will be to establish the validity of their claims and he has already collected proof of the unbroken line of descent from Henry Miller. Col. Brown has devoted much care and attention to the matter and feels that his ultimate success in the case is already assured.

The damage suit for $10,000 against C. W. Metcalfe and M. C. Forbes, growing out of the killing of a negro boy named Emmett Gant, on Nov. 10, 1888, was dismissed by Judge McPherson Wednesday. Gant was run over and killed by an engine and a train of wagons that were being drawn through the streets to celebrate the railroad election victory. The boy was killed while he, with other boys, was riding on the wagons. The court held that there was nothing in the case.

Mr. D. L. Johnson went to Guthrie last week to represent Evergreen Lodge in the K. of P. conference looking to the celebration at Guthrie on July 4. Arrangements were perfected for a grand Pythian re-union on that day, at which eight lodges will be represented. Col. J. H. Powell will deliver his laughable and entertaining lecture on "Pythianism Exposed" and other speeches will be made, one by Rev. Jno. O. Rust. A good time generally is anticipated and with favorable weather a great crowd may be looked for.

Maj. Crumbaugh now has twelve blooded mares and ten yearling fillies at Elkwood Farm, besides his great $5,000 stallion, Elkwood. One of his mares has a young colt, which has the honor of being the first foaled on the farm. The grounds are beautifully located in a shady woods on the river bank and contain 183 acres. The stables are all new and commodious and there is an appearance of the substantial about all improvements being made. Maj. Crumbaugh has invested a great deal of capital in this enterprise and his friends hope to see him make a complete success of it.

The Moayan building is now about ready for the brickwork. The block when done will at once take a place among the important business blocks of the city. There will be three store rooms. The eastern one has been leased to the Express Company and the corner one to a grocery firm. The second story will contain offices in front and the Tobacco Exchange in a room 50x70 feet in the rear. This is being fitted up especially for the business, the floors being deeded and other steps taken to make it a very desirable and well equipped room. It will also be well adapted for a dancing hall. The building will be completed in three months.
